Methodology

Assembled from DataCite full-metadata capture; no live authorial surface passed the body-head gate or existed for this work at restoration time. All captured fields rendered verbatim in the body.

Falsification Conditions

Superseded on sight by any recovered canonical bytes; the captured metadata is verifiable against the DataCite API historical record and the Zenodo tombstone.

Captured description: A founding document establishing the relationship between protest and semantic infrastructure. This text argues that protest requires grammar—not syntax, but the structural conditions that allow meaning to persist beyond the moment of utterance. Without such grammar, protest dissolves into content, testimony becomes footage, and refusal cannot accumulate across time.

The document operates as a somatic-logotic bridge: it begins in the body (breath, heat, crowd) and moves through the machinery of summarization that converts lived experience into tagged data. It names the problem (the scream heard as noise) and offers the response (infrastructure that lets presence persist).

Written for the protester, the organizer, the one who has watched a night that changed their body become a paragraph that was wrong about everything.

Part of the Crimson Hexagon / NH-OS distributed architecture. Depends on VPCOR Charter (10.5281/zenodo.18362663).

Captured subjects: protest, grammar, infrastructure, semantic economy, meaning collapse, Spivak, Rancière, Butler, Freire, Hall, Lorde, Kaba, adrienne maree brown, Federici, Robinson, summarization, testimony, accumulation, VPCOR, Vox Populi, community praxis, somatic, logotic, breath, refusal

Full text not yet recovered. If the canonical bytes surface on any authorial surface, a full-text version supersedes this record in-series per the versioning protocol. This record exists so the DOI resolves to the work's true identity rather than to silence.
